Krasnoyarsk 2010

Dear guests!

Krasnoyarsk State Medical University named after Professor V.F.Voino-Yasenetsky welcomes participants of the IX conference of urologists of Siberia with international participation which is focused on current problems of Urology and Oncourology!

Urology is developing very rapidly during last decades due to application of new technologies based on results of basic sciences either in diagnostics or treatment. Several methods of high-resolution visualization and endoscopic diagnostics allow detecting a pathological process in urogenital tract and planning the correcting procedures with minimal risk. Molecular and biochemical methods widen the opportunities for early detection and screening of oncourological diseases. Significant changes happened in the treatment of urological disorders, and up-to-date pharmacological approaches have reduced the number of operations. Also, operative methods become to be safe and minimally invasive, thus reducing the surgical trauma.

The Organizing Committee of the conference has prioritized the following questions for discussion: diagnostics and treatment of urological and oncourological diseases, problems of neurourology and urogynecology, and mechanisms for effective transfer of achievements of basic sciences and modern technologies into the medical practice in the context of translational medicine.

We are very grateful for our Russian and foreign partners for their personal contribution to development of scientific program of the conference. I hope this forum would be very productive and significant for medical science and practice. Discussing the above-mentioned problems would give us optimal approaches to unified protocols in diagnostics, treatment and prevention of urological diseases.

Have a successful meeting!

*Co-chairman of the Organizing Committee,
Professor Ivan P.Artyukhov,
Rector of the Krasnoyarsk State Medical University
named after Professor V.F.Voino-Yasenetsky,

Greeting address

Dear participants of the IX conference of urologists of Siberia with international participation!

It is my pleasure to give welcome remarks on the occasion of the Opening Ceremony of the IX conference of urologists of Siberia!

This conference is devoted to discussing new opportunities for treatment and diagnostics of urological and oncourological diseases. It is become very clear that application of up-to-date methods determines the movement from evidence based medicine to sustainable solutions for public health problems. I hope that discussions during plenary session as well as session meetings and round-tables at this conference will help to construct the most efficient strategy to link basic scientific discoveries with the arena of clinical investigation, and translating the results of clinical trials into changes in clinical practice.

It is very important that some topics at the conference are focused on application of international standards into clinical practice in Urology and Oncourology. Mutual understanding and joint activity are the mandatory requirements for the development. I am sure that the format of the conference will give the opportunities to find new approaches to optimization of diagnostic and treatment protocols.

I had attended the conference on Urology held in Krasnoyarsk couple of years ago, and I continue to keep good professional and personal links with Krasnoyarsk urologists and the staff of the Krasnoyarsk State Medical University. I wish a very big success to the conference as well as to any step in further development of collaboration between the Russian and European urologists!

With kind regards,

Sincerely yours,
